L.O. To understand the changes Florence made to nursing.

Remembering Florence Nightingale

The Crimean War ended in 1856. Florence returned to Britain in 1857 a hero. In 1860, Florence opened her own nurses' training school at St Thomas' Hospital, London.

She continued working to improve hospitals and nursing. Unfortunately, over time, Florence became more and more ill. Florence Nightingale eventually died on August 13th 1910, aged 90. She had received a special medal called the 'Royal Red Cross' from Queen Victoria, as well as The Order of Merit.

Why do we still remember Florence today? What did she do when she came home? Can you pretend to be a modern day nurse? Draw and describe what you have done. Maybe even take a photo!

You could add a photo or picture to your home learning book or email it to me. I'd love to see your efforts.

Can you build a modern hospital with Lego or your toys? Maybe even on Minecraft for those of you who love it!
